Maximize the Impact of Your Research

Stay up-to-date with the reach and influence of your research so you can then share this information with your collaborators, your academic department and your funders.

The following steps will help you get organized:

1. Submit a "shareable version" of your publication on DSpace.
2. Create a Google Scholar profile and set up alerts to track citations to articles.
3. Track citations and set up citation alerts for publications in the AUS library databases.
4. Build an online profile and make links with academics and researchers who share the same research interests. Popular sites include: ResearchGate, Academia.edu and Social Science Research Network \(SSRN\).
5. Use Alternative Metrics (Altmetrics) to track impact. Popular examples include: ImpactStory, Altmetric, Plum Analytics and PLoS Article-level Metrics Application.

Staff Profile

Monina Collins, Circulation Supervisor

I began working at the AUS Library in October, 2000. Since then I have learned the "ins and outs" of our library while witnessing the growth of our beautiful AUS campus.

I have lived and traveled in many countries including the Philippines, United States, UAE, Mexico, Norway, Singapore, Thailand, Malaysia, Oman, India, Egypt and more. I have three children; two are in university, and a son in Grade 5 in the USA.

On the job I try to respect others, to listen to differing viewpoints and to be patient and mindful in each moment. My experience at AUS has also helped me to learn more about Islamic thought, Arab and Middle Eastern Cultures. For all of that, I am thankful!

You may e-mail Monina at mcollins@aus.edu

Dspace Upgrade

The library recently upgraded to the latest version of DSpace, the AUS Institutional Repository available at dspace.aus.edu. Among the new features are a spiffy mobile interface and integration with ORCID (Open Researcher and Contributor ID).

DSpace is an online, open-access repository that showcases the work of AUS faculty, staff and students. Our growing collection includes Masters theses, ENG 207 posters, and SBA Working Papers. Content posted to DSpace is findable via search engines like Google, more frequently cited due to increased visibility, full-text searchable, and preserved for the future.

If you're interested in adding your own research or student work to the site, contact your liaison librarian or email researchhelp@aus.edu
